

ABSTRACT

A system and method is described for reliably transferring a node in a communications network from one Logical Network to another Logical Network. The system and method is reliable and robust with respect to potentially varying implementations of host devices in the communications network, and is compatible with other network management operations as specified in HomePlug Specifications.